

MEET PROTECT RURAL IOWA

SUSIE DRISH

FOR COUNTY SUPERVISOR

Experience

Susie is a lifelong resident of Iowa, graduating Fairfield High School, and then Iowa State University. She worked at the Iowa State University Veterinary diagnostic lab doing research, and went on to lead a Federal jobs initiative in Iowa with a 3 million dollar budget which led to hundreds of Iowans finding solid employment in jobs they loved. She is currently a nationally recognized breeder of prize winning horses, and is the manager of a 150 acre working farm, as well as serving as the Jefferson County supervisor for the last four years.

Accomplishments as County Supervisor

As Jefferson County Supervisor, Susie has bolstered Jefferson County's financial strength by continually working to reduce budgets, while at the same time responding to the concerns of County workers. Susie facilitated multiple federal grants, expanding internet services for county citizens. With the Roads Department, she worked to greatly improve the roads in Jefferson County. And she closely monitored emergency care services and budgeting to improve EMS services for our citizens.

Vision for the Future

- Continue to closely monitor budgets to ensure your tax dollars are spent wisely
- Continue to improve EMS services for cost-effectiveness and the highest standard of professional care
- Improve and expand road projects within Jefferson County
- Expand access to rural internet services for all
- Foster development of affordable housing projects
- Improve access to affordable childcare
- Work with local business leaders to improve our local economy
